GÜD Marketing – 2017 Statewide Survey

Chelsea Maupin, research manager of GÜD Marketing, presented results for the 2017 statewide survey, expanding upon the results shared on Aug. 28, 2017. Maupin provided a summary of the project, including methodology, timing, purpose and goals. Maupin also presented results related to key measures – importance of wildlife management, wildlife requiring management by humans to survive and wildlife management funding sources – for both southeast and west Michigan non-hunters.

The council discussed methodology – questioning if the surveys were worded the same (which they are) and the demographics of the survey. Maupin explained that the survey was balanced for statewide demographics and that regional results may not represent regional demographics. Within west Michigan, the margin of error is closer to ten percent versus three percent statewide. An online survey was used because phone surveys are skewed towards older people who have landlines.

Discussion was also had regarding sample sizes and how smaller number of responses could generate in increase in percentages such as the 18 to 24 year olds which rose to 81 percent from 39 percent.

Maupin Summarized:

The bottom line is we are moving the needle in the areas of knowledge of the council and wildlife management is important which is what we were focusing on during these first 18 months with the live campaign. We have core messages and a five year plan we are working through and the campaign will continue to build upon the foundation and introduce funding in the next level of messaging.

Opportunities

- Everyone needs to learn the funding message
- Increased targeted messages
- Increased focus on suburban counties – Wayne , Oakland and Macomb

2018 Research Recommendations

Joel Newport, creative director of Güd Marketing, presented the creative concept for the next phase of the campaign, which will include messaging about hunting and fishing license monies providing the majority of wildlife management funding in Michigan. The overall concept is to have currency blend into outdoor scenes.

The council discussed that the content needs to make sure it has factual representation of the natural resources used since there are so many partner organizations that contribute matching grants and private organizations that assist in these efforts.

The recommendation is for the concept only and final approval of the creative campaign will be done at the next MWC meeting.

Hammill made a motion to approve the creative concept as presented. Gruden seconded the motion and the creative concept was approved by unanimous vote (7-0, Stancato stepped out)

Gud Marketing – Sportsmen’s Brochure

Ally Caldwell, account coordinator of Güd Marketing, provided a quick update regarding the status of the development of the sportsmen’s communications strategy deliverables introducing a drafted sportsmen brochure to the full council.

The council and members of the public (Merle Shephard, Safari Club International) engaged in a discussion regarding this concept. Shephard indicated that he regularly fields questions regarding the messaging of the campaign and when it will be directed more towards sportsmen. The council restated the mission of the campaign was geared to those who are neutral and moderately approve of hunting, fishing and the taking of game and asked if Shephard could write down the questions he is receiving. The council would use this information to ensure these questions are answered within the brochure. Shephard commented that most sportsmen do not realize that one dollar is going to this campaign. The council stated that when sportsmen approach them with questions regarding the campaign, once explained, they are supportive of the council's efforts.

The subcommittee will take these suggestions as they further develop information pieces.
